Joey was diagnosed with atypical teratoid rhabdoid tumor at age 7. a rare tumor that is usually diagnosed in early childhood. In the United States, three children per 1,000,000 (~30 new ATRT cases) are diagnosed each year. The survival rate for children under 3 is less than 10%. Older children, when treated with chemotherapy and radiation, are closer to 70%. Joey was cancer free for 2 years, however, the cancer returned in 2011. Sadly, he lost his battle in 2012.
